

KEY COMMITTEES IN CONGRESS

This document includes the contact information for members of four key committees in the House and the Senate. These committees include: Appropriations; Armed Services; Foreign Relations; and Intelligence.

The best way to communicate with Representatives and Senators is via phone and fax—especially if you do not live within the Representative's Congressional District or the Senator's State.

You should fax a letter, petition or other written document rather than mailing it. Mail delivered by the U.S. Postal Service will typically be delayed for up to a month once it arrives at the U.S. Capitol.

If it is necessary to mail (rather than fax) a document, you can find the mailing address for each Representative and Senator at the following website: <http://tinyurl.com/cx825>

About the Committees:

The Appropriations Committee crafts the legislation that gives the various parts of the federal government the power to actually spend money out of the U.S. Treasury. The Defense Subcommittee crafts the Defense Appropriations Bill that gives the Department of Defense the power to spend money.

The Armed Services Committee crafts the piece of legislation called the Defense Authorization Bill. This bill establishes the programs that may be funded by the Department of Defense and sets a funding level for these programs. However, this bill does not actually give the Department of Defense the power to spend money out of the U.S. Treasury. That power is given in the Appropriations Bill.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee focus upon such matters as diplomatic relations, economic assistance, etc. Each has a subcommittee that focuses upon U.S. engagement in South and Central Asia and in the Middle East.

The Intelligence Committees may be most important to approach and work with to challenge covert U.S. action in the region. For example, the Intelligence Committees exercise some oversight over the C.I.A.'s use of drones in Pakistan.

You can find complete contact information (including mailing addresses and information about locations of local offices of Representatives and Senators) at the following website:
